Have you ever had the experience of walking to the fridge, opening the door and forgetting what you were about to take? This is usually called "the fridge-door effect". A similar situation happens when you are about to say something but can't remember the words that you need. This is the famous "tip-of-the-tongue phenomenon". Both the fridge-door effect and tip-of-the-tongue phenomenon are deterioration of memory performance. It happens more frequently for people as they get into their 40's and 50's.

People tend to forget non-essential information within 18 to 30 seconds. Once the information is used by the brain in some other way, it can last for up to several minutes. If we keep using it, it can turn into a long-term memory and will become closer to being remembered for all time.

The fridge-door effect happens due to the disappearance of short-term-memory information. On the way from your room to the fridge, you are probably paying attention to something else, and the original focus is then removed from short-term memory. Thus, once you get to the fridge, you just can't remember what you were going to take. The tip-of-tongue phenomenon happens due to a slowdown of memory performance, similar to the situation of an old CPU in a computer. When information processing slows down, longer time will be needed for the brain to find the needed information.

In addition to growing old, lack of sleep, taking medicine, overworking and anxiety can all lead to deterioration of memory performance. Exercising is especially helpful towards maintaining or improving memory performance. It increases blood flow to the brain and helps memory performance, both in short and long terms.

36. Which word has the closest meaning as “deterioration”?
- (A) pleasure (B) worsening (C) loss (D) confidence
37. Which one is true according to the article?
- (A) Fridge-door effect is related with long-term memory.
- (B) If we keep using information, it will turn into a short-term memory.
- (C) We cannot change our memory performance by changing living habits.
- (D) Lack of sleep, medication and overworking will affect both long-term and short-term memory.

The idea may hit you once or twice a year. You come home on a hot summer day, hoping to have a cool bath, and find out there is no water. Then you see how important water is in your everyday life. However, in many parts of the world, water is not just about one's everyday needs.

In countries like Tanzania, water is hard to get, and the job of collecting water falls on women's shoulders. Girls are often kept home from school to collect water while their brothers stay at school studying. Studies show Tanzanian girls who live 15 minutes from clean water spend 12% more time at school than those who live an hour away. More time spent collecting water means less time for learning. For these girls, "Knowledge is power" is not just words; it is a sad fact in real life. With less time spent at school, their chances of getting well-paid jobs are small, and they often have no voice in important matters, like who to marry. These girls are often married into poor families. They have little money or knowledge to take care of their children, who often end up dying young. For the baby girls who are lucky enough to live, their life may still center around "water," just like it did for their mothers.

 - (B) Girls who spend little time at school have a harder life when they grow up.
 - (C) Children in poor countries die from drinking dirty water every day.
 - (D) Children from poor families are often kept from school to take care of younger children.
47. What does "The idea" mean in the reading?
- (A) Water is important in one's everyday life.
 - (B) We should not take a bath when there is little water.
 - (C) Water is not just about one's everyday needs.
 - (D) It is nice to have a cool bath on a hot summer day.
