三、閱讀測驗 (每題 2 分)

The latest craze in extreme sports has bridged the gap between man and bird. It's called "wingsuit flying," and it might just be the most dangerous sport in the world.

Wingsuit flying is a type of BASE jumping; that means people jump of high objects and land with parachutes. The difference lies in the gear involved. A wingsuit jumper wears a special type of suit. It adds surface area between his or her arms and legs. This added area creates drag so that the jumper is able to fly for several minutes before landing with a parachute. Wingsuit jumpers look very distinctive flying through the air. Some people say they look like bats, and the others say they look like superheroes racing to save the day.

As with any other extreme sport, people are drawn to wingsuit flying for the thrill of it. However, it can be a very dangerous sport. There's no room for error when learning to fly in a wingsuit. One wrong move can mean death, just as it did for Dean Potter, one of the sport's leading figures. Dean died in May 2015 during a jump in Yosemite National Park in the United States.
