Concerning air problems, some countries in the world are trying different ways to power buses. Take the UK for example, coffee waste helps make a new kind of biofuel and power some of the buses in London. Companies collect coffee waste from coffee shops, restaurants, and coffee factories. Then after some processes, the companies get coffee oil from the waste and use it to make the biofuel.

Using coffee oil to make biofuel is an amazing idea because when people drink coffee, there is coffee waste. A study shows people in London drink about 5.5 million cups of coffee every day. The coffee waste can be useful. Besides, buses powered by this kind of biofuel are better to the environment. In the future, this kind of biofuel may help with the air problems.
